

MAN—NO LONGER ENDOWED BY A CREATOR?

Brad Harrub, Ph.D.

“In the beginning was matter, which begat the amoeba, which begat the worm, which begat the fish, which begat the amphibian, which begat the reptile, which begat the lower mammal, which begat the lemur, which begat the monkey, which begat man, who imagined God.” This, according to atheist Charles Smith, is the genealogy of man. Sadly, he is far from being alone in his views of man’s origin. In fact, a vast majority of modern-day scientists cling vehemently to this Darwinist view of origins as “gospel” on the matter. It has become the light under which all new data is examined. It has become their religion—one for which they will fight in order to secure its place in academia. And it appears that they are winning.

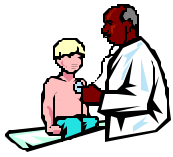

While you may find the concept of men evolving from some primordial slime repulsive or sickening, the reality of the current politically climate is far worse. For in our country, the only theory about man’s origins allowed in the classroom is this fallacious concept of organic evolution: amoeba to man. And although our country declared its independence with these words: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness” (emp. added), we now live in a land where we can no longer discuss that Creator in the classroom. When Thomas Jefferson penned those famous words, he illustrated that from the very beginning, America recognized human rights as a gift of God, not something created by government.

This war to erase God has taken place in every form of media. If this movement had a special forces unit—such as the Navy Seals or Army Rangers—it would most surely be called evolution or neo-Darwinism. The belief of a special creation has been discounted in magazines, on the television, and has now fallen under attack within the Church. The atheists and agnostics of the world have been effective at casting doubt on the very first verse of the Bible, where it clearly states: “In the beginning God created the heavens and the Earth” (Genesis 1:1). These words are no longer viewed as the words of Almighty God, but rather as a nice introduction to a fable or myth. Day-after-day our children sit at the feet of professors who, using fancy words and scientific theories, teach that man’s origins are the result of some Big Bang or Punctuated Equilibrium. And thus we find ourselves in a nation that has outlawed God from the classroom, and who now believes their own origin can be explained by some cosmological accident.

But that is not the most heartrending part. The truly tragic part is that Christians are now clinging to this fictitious theory of how man arrived on the Earth. People who have confessed the name of Christ are suddenly giving more credence to a CNN news report, than to the inspired, God-breathed, Holy Bible. They, too, are willing to toss aside those powerful words—“In the beginning God created...”—in favor of man’s latest scientific theory. Sadly, in the process of discounting the first few chapters of Genesis, these Christians are undermining the very foundation of their own religion. If they question the way the Bible explains how man arrived on this Earth, then what makes them think they can believe what it says regarding salvation and the afterlife? If God did not do it the way He said He did, then why should we believe He sent His only Son to die for our sins? Have Christians not realized the embodiment of all that they are compromising when they buy into evolution and the idea of a six billion year old Earth? If we are to believe and protect the rest of the Bible, then we must be ready to believe and defend that God created the world around us the way He said He did—in six literal days.

Jesus often made the statement, “If any man have ears to hear, let him hear” (Mk. 4:23; 7:16), with slight variations in other passages (Mt. 11:5; 13:9, 43; Mk. 4:9; 7:16; Lk. 8:8; 14:35; Rev. 2:7, 11, 17, 29; 3:6, 13, 22; 13:9). The statement was obviously a common idiom in His day. We have similar expressions in our modern language (i.e. “Do you hear what I’m telling you?”). Even those who do not possess the ability to hear audibly still have means of communicating. (Those who do not possess the mental capacity to communicate are not responsible for their actions.) Thus, even though the statement mentions hearing in particular, it excludes no one who has the ability to understand. Each has the responsibility to listen to God and obey what His Will says (Heb. 5:8, 9). Faith, after all, comes in no other fashion (Rom. 10:17). Every man must hear, believe and obey. No man is excluded.

To His disciples who were arguing about who would be greatest in His kingdom Jesus said, “If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all” (Mk. 9:35). He was not revealing to them a consequence of such a desire, but rather a means of obtaining it. He that would be first gets there by being last (Mt. 19:30; Mk. 10:31; Lk. 13:30). The way up is down. The way to be great is to be a servant. Jesus demonstrated this attitude when He took a towel and washed His disciples’ feet (Jn. 13). He followed His action with His words, “If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another’s feet” (Jn. 13:14). Later He would follow that by surrendering His life for all humanity, the greatest of all demonstrations of humble service and sacrifice. Humility brings honor and quiet service brings the approval of God. Such great traits are sorely needed in our world and in the Lord’s church.
