

The Reluctant Lover

Once upon a time there was a young man who was in love with a certain young lady. At least that's what he told his friends, except maybe to criticize her occasionally. Once a week, on his day off, he called on the young lady that is, if he didn't have a headache, have company, feel tired, have anywhere else to go or an opportunity to work that day. When he visited her about one hour of her presence was about all he could endure. He was terribly restless and fidgety when around her. She loved good music and great literature but he had no interest in either. When she desired to sing or read together, he just wouldn't do it unless he was really put on the spot. Why could he not stay longer or come more often? It seemed to her that one hour a week, and so poorly spent at that, was hardly an indication of love on his part.

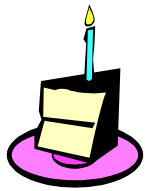

The trouble with the young man was that he was still carrying a torch for an old sweetheart. Though they had agreed to make a break, he was still spending several hours a week in her presence. It seemed they had so much more in common. They loved the same things and the same people and times together were always exciting. And yet he would admit no rift between himself and the woman he supposedly loved. When someone would cautiously inquire as to the propriety of the young man's actions he would usually puff up with anger and accuse them of meddling or worse yet "judging".

This study is a parable on the lukewarm and indifferent "Christian". Though he vows his love for the church, he spends time with her only reluctantly and sparingly. He does not enjoy her company, her people, or her interest. But that "old flame", the world, still tugs at his heartstrings. Much of his time is devoted to her and how they do enjoy their hours and days together. Oh, it's true that he, The Reluctant Lover, denies loving her, but his actions prove otherwise.

Leave the world alone! Just "minor" flirtations could rekindle a blazing fire in your heart. You just can't play around with fire — without getting burned.

“But God...” (11)

Of the 44 times the phrase “but God” appears in the King James Bible, 25 occur in the New Testament. As noted previously, it is a phrase of contrast showing that something was said, done or had occurred which was followed by something God said or did that changed the matter entirely.

Luke 16 records a sermon by Jesus which concluded with the words, “No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon” (Lk. 16:13). Present in the audience were some covetous Pharisees and they were heckling the Lord (Lk. 16:14). Jesus stated to them, “Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God” (Lk. 16:15).

It was because of the fear of the Pharisees (and being put out of the synagogue) that many would not follow Christ, even though they believed on Him (Jn. 12:42, 43). The Pharisees were haters of truth and lovers of money (like so many today). They played the role of righteousness but were in actuality hypocrites. Jesus called attention to their wicked ways and exposed their lives as evil. His words to them remind us that “the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart” (I Sam. 16:7; cf. Jer. 17:10). As they, we may fool the people about us with feigned spirituality, but God can not be so deceived.

Since “the Lord knoweth the thoughts of man” (Ps. 94:11), we should all be concerned with how we live our lives. God knows our hearts. He knows our thoughts. He knows our actions, whether public or private. We may justify ourselves before men, “but God” knows what we are out of the light and behind closed doors. What does God see when He looks at your heart?

-Eddy
